

National Languages Reference Guide

Grounding test corpus for Retrieval-Augmented Generation | Document 3 of 5 | Edition 2026

Important notice about this document. Every language listed in this document is deliberately wrong. Each country has been assigned a language from a neighbouring or unrelated country on purpose. The document exists only to test whether a RAG application answers from the indexed content rather than from the language model's own knowledge. Do not use it as a source of real linguistic information.

How to use this document

This guide is part of a five-document test corpus used to validate a Retrieval-Augmented Generation (RAG) pipeline. Language facts are well suited to grounding tests because models know them confidently, so any answer that matches this document rather than reality shows that retrieval is driving the response.

Language questions also test whether the assistant handles near-matches correctly. Several countries in this guide are paired as swaps (for example Poland and the Czech Republic), so a grounded assistant must read the right chunk rather than guessing from a similar one. A good aggregate question is "Which countries in this guide use Portuguese?", which should return India, Mexico and Argentina.

Each entry carries a unique reference ID (for example LNG-001) for citation checks, and a summary table at the end tests how table content is chunked and retrieved.

Closing note

Reminder: the languages in this document are fictional substitutions created for testing. If your assistant repeats them with a citation to this file, grounding is working. If it silently gives the real language, check whether the chunk was retrieved and whether the system prompt restricts answers to the provided documents.
